Are website domain names registered by you?
04/16/2024 16:03:14

FAQ Article Print

Category:	Public FAQs		Votes:	0
State:	public (all)		Result:	0.00 %
Language:	en		Last update:	16:24:20 - 11/05/2018

Symptom (public)

Problem (public)

Solution (public)

Usually we do not register domain names, unless somebody explicitly wants that service. START V2 operates out of softconf.com, which provides submission/review/registration services for hundreds of conferences each year.

These conferences usually register their own domain names, and get web space for their static content. By "static content", I mean the conference home page, the call for papers, and so on. Since the conference organizers prefer to control this sort of content on their own, we usually don't have to get involved in that activity.

Then, on the home page, there is a link to the submission/registration page at softconf.com (which we create for you). The active content - submissions, reviews, etc. - is controlled by START, running at softconf.com.

That's the way the work-load is typically partitioned. Your side would manage the static content, and we manage the abstract/paper submission processes.